AMERICAN FOUNDATIONS AND THEIR FIELDS

AMERICAN FOUNDATIONS INFORMATION SERVICE

American Foundations Information Service is the national center for foundation information. It was established in 1952 as the outgrowth of foundation work conducted by the firm of Raymond Rich Associates since 1939. The firm remains the principal sponsor of the Service which is conducted in the public interest and endeavors to be self-supporting through sale of publications and services.

The present four-point program has been developed in recognition of the increasing significance of foundations in American life and with the encouragement of the majority of the important foundations.

THE BOOK American Foundations and Their Fields

Presents basic descriptions of foundations about which information has been obtained and contains index of foundation fields of interest—Published at intervals of three to four years.

THE PERIODICAL American Foundations News

Reports foundation grants and activities, changes in their policies, personnel and addresses, and the highlights of Federal and state developments affecting foundations and other tax-exempt organizations—Published in volumes of eight issues each.

TELEPHONE AND MAIL INQUIRY

Provides basic information regarding individual foundations in response to subscribers' inquiries—Information sought if not on file.

CONSULTATION AND SPECIAL REPORTS

Provides counsel for trustees and officers of foundations and their attorneys regarding the organization and operation of foundations —Undertakes studies in response to special inquiries from trustees and officers of foundations.

FOREWORD

The origin of the series of guides to American foundations and their fields of interest points up the usefulness of this seventh volume. A quarter of a century ago, when the Twentieth Century Fund was seeking to find its most effective field of activity, the first step it took was to make a survey of the areas in which the older, well-established foundations spent their income—education, health, social service, etc. The findings showed economics to be the field least cultivated at that time and largely influenced the Fund to concentrate its interest there.

The value to the Fund of the first study convinced the trustees that it, and others like it, would be useful to all individuals and organizations seeking the most fruitful objectives for their giving. During the years 1931 to 1935 the Fund, therefore, made and published for general circulation three other, and more ambitious, surveys of this kind.

Subsequently, however, Raymond Rich Associates agreed with the Fund to take over all the files which the Fund had built up on foundation activities and assume responsibility for the publication of these guides in the future. The Rich organization put out the fourth edition in 1939, the fifth in 1942, and the sixth in 1948.

The experience of both the Fund and Raymond Rich Associates showed that these volumes were invaluable not only to those who give but also to those who seek to receive. Prior to their publication there was no single source to which applicants for philanthropic aid could go for information as to the agencies most likely to be interested—judged by their past disbursements, their stated purposes, and their reported current fields of interest. A service of this kind has been also of value, even though indirect, to givers. It has decreased the number of applications for assistance entirely outside their chosen fields.

The contribution of these volumes has, of course, markedly increased with the growth in the number and the resources of foundations and with the widened demands for financial help from nonprofit agencies working in the public interest. The first edition published by Raymond Rich Associates covered 243 foundations; this one describes 4,162. And, with the increase in the numbers included has come more information about most of them individually.

This seventh edition is certainly the indispensable reference book in the field of organized philanthropic giving. The Twentieth Century Fund has watched with pride and admiration the maturing of this project-child under the skillful care of its foster parents. Raymond Rich Associates and their co-sponsor, Marts and Lundy—and most especially Wilmer Shields Rich and American Foundations Information Service which she conducts and which is directly responsible for its preparation—deserve unmeasured appreciation for their public service in issuing this volume, the more so in view of the financial risks involved in the undertaking.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

This book is the product of many minds and many hands. Without the editorial collaboration of my husband, Raymond T. Rich, and his prodigious checking of the content of foundation descriptions, the standards of the volume would have been inferior. And the devotion of the entire staff to the production of an accurate and complete reference work on American foundations is reminiscent of eras now largely passed. To a man, they rose to the occasion when overtime work had to be scheduled for months on end, repeatedly putting the seventh edition ahead of their own interests.

Moreover, the information contributed by the officers and trustees of cooperating foundations greatly enhanced the quality of the foundation descriptions. In some instances their suggestions had such wide application that they altered the pattern of many descriptions. Thanks go to them for such thoughtful consideration of the material submitted in advance of publication.

Special mention is due our counsellors. Without the vast experience of Dr. Neva R. Deardorff, who served as research consultant for the study, the statistical analysis of this comprehensive body of foundation data would have been much less professional. To our attorneys, Mr. Morris Hadley, of the firm of Milbank, Tweed, Hope and Hadley, and his associate, Mrs. Rebecca Cutler, we are grateful for wise counsel regarding the specifications determining inclusion of foundations and for guidance on other legal questions submitted to them.

Not only does this book have many authors rather than one, but the auspices of its publication are multiple rather than single. Behind American Foundations Information Service in this first nation-wide collection of public records of foundations has been, throughout, our sponsor, Raymond Rich Associates. But it is because the firm of Marts and Lundy, Inc., believed in the research sufficiently to collaborate with Raymond Rich Associates that the analysis and preparation of material for publication could be financed. Two other sponsors to whom our warm appreciation goes are Mr. Yoland D. Markson and Mr. and Mrs. Douglas H. MacNeil.

If this book proves to have value for foundations and nonprofit organizations seeking to understand foundations, it is to the aforementioned persons and firms that much of the credit should be given.

INTRODUCTION

The rapid growth of foundations in the past 10 or 12 years, the emergence of the giant Ford Foundation and a number of others with assets in eight and nine figures, and the questionable practices of a few foundations, but above all the fact that foundation funds play such a vital part in the development of charitable, religious, educational, and scientific work, made it seem imperative that the Seventh Edition of AMERICAN FOUNDATIONS AND THEIR FIELDS be based upon as much factual information as it was practical to obtain. Accordingly, the preparation of this volume has involved not only the securing of information voluntarily furnished by foundations, but also the recording of public documents. The transcription of the public records resulted in the production of 25,000 photographs of various portions of the legal documents and financial returns of some 6,000 foundations. Described herein are the 4,162 foundations on which information over and above name and address was obtained and which met specifications for inclusion.

Specifications

Specifications for inclusion confine coverage in this edition to the foundation in the American understanding of the term: that is to say, one which is a nonprofit, legal entity having a principal fund of its own, or receiving the charitable contributions of a living founder or founders, which is governed by its own trustees or directors and which has been established to serve the welfare of mankind. Foundations of various legal forms are covered, including those bearing a wide variety of other names such as fund, trust, endowment, corporation, association, society. Community foundations and trusts are included, being in reality many foundations in one. The National Science Foundation, although structurally no more than an agency of the Federal Government established by Act of the Congress, is functionally a true foundation using its available funds to seek solutions to certain of mankind's problems. Therefore it, too, has been included.

Descriptions also cover some 500 small foundations. Often such small foundations tend to increase in size following the first few years of their operation. Moreover, the record shows that many of them become the recipients of testamentary bequests and, in such instances, some have been known to move into the million dollar category.

Inclusion implies only the meeting of the above named specifications. It does not mean endorsement of program or policies.

Although they are foundations in the broadest sense, endowed educational and religious institutions are for obvious reasons not considered to be within the specifications. Accordingly, they have not been described. And, worthwhile as their programs may be, "foundations" of the following types have also been excluded:

> Foundations which solicit or appeal for endowment or operating funds. Examples: American Foundation for the Blind, Inc.; National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, Inc.; Damon Runyon Memorial Fund for Cancer Research.
> Foundations which have been created for the benefit of a single institution or group. Examples: Indiana University Foundation; and the largest foundation in Arkansas, the Geo. W. Donaghey Foundation which was created for the sole benefit of Little Rock Junior College.
> Foundations which are not only domiciled at an institution but are actually a part of it, the funds being controlled by the institution's trustees: Examples: The George F. Baker Foundation of Harvard University's Graduate School of Business Administration; the University of Wichita Foundation for Industrial Research.
> Foundations whose activities are restricted to the furnishing of a clinical or other community service. Examples: Los Angeles Orthopedic Foundation; Memorial Cancer Foundation of Santa Barbara.

Also excluded as not of general interest are many hundreds of small trusts created for the sole benefit of local institutions.

Finally, foundation descriptions do not include the grant-making programs of corporations which are conducted under the auspices of the corporation itself rather than under separate and distinct legal entities. This accounts for the omission of such valuable activities as the Fellowship Program of E. I. du Pont de Nemours, Inc., and General Motors Corporation Corporate Alumnus program.

Total Number of Foundations

Despite nation-wide coverage, it cannot be said that this book describes all foundations which are in existence at the present time and which would meet the above specifications. The lack of central recording of basic data of all foundations and trusts at their inception results in a situation in which even the Federal Government does not know the number of foundations in existence today, not to mention their location, their resources, their legal structure or the nature of their activities. After a foundation or trust has operated for 12 months, its trustees must file a return with the Internal Revenue Service, those seeking exemption under section 501(c)(3) of the Code simultaneously filing an application for same. But until this time has elapsed, the existence of an entity of this character may be known only to state officials if it is a corporate body and, except for Ohio and New Hampshire, only to local officials if it is created under a trust instrument. The accessibility of information regarding incorporated foundations varies with the states; and virtually no information is available concerning trusts unless they are of the testamentary type.[1] Therefore, if a foundation or trust is not publicly announced at the time of its creation, and if the trustees do not voluntarily furnish descriptive information about it, even the barest facts may not come to light until its first return is filed.

If it were practical to obtain records of all foundations, it is likely that approximately 7,300[2] would be found which would meet the specifications for inclusion in this volume. Reliable persons who have referred to the existence of 30,000 foundations have no doubt based their statements upon a count of the organizations included in the Treasury Department's, Cumulative List. Others, who have referred to the existence of 10,000 foundations, doubtless included all organizations which use the name foundation many of which, as stated above, are not foundations in the American sense.

Establishment and Motivation

As shown in Table 1, only 10 of the 4,164[1] foundations covered in this study were established prior to 1900. Only one of these, the American Missionary Association, is in the largest resource class.[2] The real beginning of the rise of the great free endowments, set up independently of any existing charitable, educational or religious institution, began at the turn of the century. Sixteen foundations were established in the first decade of the twentieth century, seven of which fall, according to their latest reported assets, in the $10 million and over class. Among them were several of the great foundations established by Andrew Carnegie, the Russell Sage Foundation, the New York Foundation, and the Milbank Memorial Fund. The General Education Board was established by John D. Rockefeller in 1902, but is not included in this count since its operations have terminated.[3]

[1] Tables refer to 4,164 foundations because two foundations which were below minimum size for description were inadvertently tabulated.

[2] See Resources, infra.

[3] Table 1, like all the tables, includes no foundations which have ceased functioning. Therefore, care should be exercised in drawing from it any historical conclusions.

The average number of foundations established per year in the next decade rose to 7.5 and included three foundations now in the $100 million class: the Carnegie Corporation, the Rockefeller Foundation, and the Commonwealth Fund. The rate jumped to 16.9 per year in the 1920's with the result that by 1930 there were 270 foundations in existence.

The donors of the foundations established in the first three decades of this century were, in the main, millionaire philanthropists inspired by Andrew Carnegie's gospel of wealth which challenged the millionaire to be "a trustee for the poor, entrusted for a season with a great part of the increased wealth of the community, but administering it for the community." Their prime motivation was unquestionably philanthropic, but they also had need to dispose of their surplus wealth.[1]

During the 1930's, the rate per year doubled that of the 1920's reaching an average of 33 foundations. A few of the foundations established during this period were, like the earlier ones, endowed by a living founder from his surplus wealth or through a testamentary bequest. Among such foundations were the Hayden Foundation, the Kellogg Foundation, and the James Foundation of New York.

However, the majority of the 330 foundations established in this decade may be looked upon as precursors of the thousands of family foundations to come in the 1940's. Again the founders were philanthropically motivated, but instead of being concerned over surplus wealth, they were seeking to reduce their taxable income by increasing their gifts to charitable, educational and similar causes. Some were concerned over income taxes, others over estate and gift taxes. Accordingly, foundations were created with relatively small initial assets to provide a receptacle for ultimate tax savings. Among these were the Ford Foundation, the Lilly Endowment, the Louis W. and Maud Hill Family Foundation (under the name of Lexington Foundation), the Olin Foundation, the Samuel Fels Fund, the John A. Hartford Foundation.

Use of the foundation as an efficient medium for administration of increased giving to philanthropic causes came into full swing in the 1940's when the average number of foundations established per year rose to 250. The peak year was 1948 when 427 foundations were established. Characteristic of the foundations established in this decade was the fact that the majority of them, according to latest reported assets, fall in the category of those having less than $1 million or receiving annual gifts from their donors insufficient in size to permit the making of annual grants of $50,000 and more. Of the 260 foundations established between 1900 and 1929, only 44 per cent were in the small category, whereas this category absorbed 85 per cent of the 2,749 foundations established in the 1940's.

[1] Lindeman, Eduard C. WEALTH AND CULTURE: A Study of 100 Foundations and Community Trusts and Their Operations During the Decade 1921-1930. Harcourt, Brace, New York. 1936.

How many foundations will arise in the 1950's remains to be seen. Incomplete figures for the first four years of the decade indicate that the average rate of establishment in these years was 200 and that 82 per cent of these foundations are of the small variety.

The Company Donor

Table 1 is also designed to show the onset of the so-called company foundation. It indicates that by 1939 there were 40 foundations in existence which report a company donor. The purposes of the early company foundations usually show concern with aid to employees as well as with philanthropic giving. This early group and those recently established by large corporations can properly be called company or corporation foundations. It is, however, a misnomer to term all foundations which report company donors, company or corporation foundations. Foundations receiving the deductions of closely held corporations are often used also as a channel for the charitable and educational giving of the family. Therefore, since so many serve a double purpose, the entire group has been identified herein as those having a company donor rather than as company or corporation foundations.

Table 1 further indicates that whereas only seven per cent of the foundations established prior to 1940 report a company donor, 20 per cent of those established during the 1940's and 23 per cent of those established thus far in the 1950's contain company funds. Eighty per cent of these foundations are small.

Inasmuch as the foundation donor is not always reported, the 724 foundations discovered in this study, in which a company donor was named, can not be considered conclusive. However, the figure may indicate that the number of so-called corporation foundations in the country today does not reach the thousands often mentioned. If the proportion found in this study holds for the total estimated 7,500 foundations, the figure 724 would indicate that there may be 1,300 such foundations in existence today. Assuming inadequacy of these figures, it is not likely that there are more than 2,000 foundations in which all or a part of the funds come from the treasuries of a company or business.

Legal Structure

The study produced material concerning the legal structure of 2,981 foundations and trusts. Russell Sage Foundation's study in 1946[1] brought to light information regarding the legal status of 287 foundations. A more detailed study made two years later by M. M. Chambers for the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching[2] analyzed the legal documents of 18 foundations, most of which fell in the largest resource category. The difference between the new material and that assembled formerly is that facts have been obtained concerning the legal structure of many of the newer foundations.

Analysis of the material shows that the 2,981 foundations are divided as follows:

Legal Structure	Number
Incorporated	2,262
Trust	572
Testamentary Trust	102
Trust also Incorporated	45

Thus, 77 per cent are corporate bodies and 23 per cent are unincorporated trusts.

It should be noted that 45 trusts were subsequently incorporated, bringing the total corporate bodies to 2,307. This practice was found to be most prevalent in Michigan. Corporate bodies serve as channels for the distribution of funds bequeathed under the Will of an individual as well as those assigned through living trusts.

The 674 trusts include 102 testamentary trusts, with the largest number of these found in the State of Pennsylvania.

Foundations tend to be incorporated whether they are large or small. Approximately three-fourths of the foundations in all resource categories except the very largest one are corporate bodies. In the case of those having $10 million and over in assets, the figures show 45 corporate bodies and 23 trusts, making the relationship one of two-thirds incorporated to one-third unincorporated.

Forces which appear to determine the legal structure of foundations are the type of legal counsel and common practice within the state. In the following list, showing relative distribution of corporate bodies and trusts in 12 states having significant numbers of foundations, New York, Maryland, New Jersey and Wisconsin have the largest percentages of corporate bodies. In Missouri, Massachusetts, and Pennsylvania, trusts are more prevalent.

State	Corporate Bodies		Trusts
	Number	Per Cent of Total	Number	Per Cent of Total
California	116	82	26	18
Connecticut	53	75	18	25
Delaware	18	75	6	25
Illinois	199	82	43	18
Maryland	117	91	12	9
Massachusetts	36	40	55	60
Michigan	89	73	33	27
Missouri	26	35	79	65
New Jersey	58	89	7	11
New York	976	92	81	8
Ohio	47	54	40	46
Pennsylvania	46	40	70	60
Texas	55	65	30	35
Wisconsin	43	83	9	17

It is probable that a large proportion of the 1,081 entities on which information concerning legal structure was not obtained fall in the category of charitable trusts. Inquiries to Secretaries of State concerning the legal structure of many of these revealed the absence of such a corporation in that state and no report of a "foreign" corporation which had received permission to do business therein. Despite this probability, such foundations were not tabulated as trusts due to the fact that some states do not routinely report Delaware and other "foreign" corporations which have qualified for operation within their boundaries.

It is general knowledge that a great many trusts exist in the states of New Hampshire and Rhode Island. No analysis was made of the material obtained for these states, however, because of the high proportion of foundations discovered therein whose legal structure is unkown.

Common practice within a state also appears to affect the term of existence of foundations which are incorporated in it. In Illinois, for example, many of the legal documents examined show that the foundation was set up for perpetual existence. In Texas, on the other hand, foundations are frequently established for 50 years. Inasmuch as many such foundations renew their certificates of incorporation at the end of the term, such foundations cannot be said to be limited. In Georgia, where many foundations are given a 35 year term, the legal documents often indicate right of renewal at the end of the stated term.

Resources

Assets of the 4,164 foundations covered in this study were found to be $4.5 billion. Inasmuch as assets tabulated were the latest reported official figures, recently received gifts from living founders or testamentary bequests are not reflected in the totals. For example, the estate of John A. Hartford was settled in 1954 bringing over $50 million to the foundation, yet the latest available official report of assets showed them to be only $3.6 million. Similarly, the Fleischmann Foundation now has assets of $53 million but 1953 figures which were tabulated amounted to only $9.7 million. The $20 million gift of John D. Rockefeller Jr. to the Sealantic Fund in 1955 could not be included. Latest reported assets of the Edward John Noble Foundation, as of the year 1952, amount to $1.6 million, whereas gifts from the donor alone since that year have totaled $7 million. The addition of such amounts plus those which will probably accrue shortly from estates now in the process of settlement, would increase total foundation assets to approximately $4.7 billion.

For the purposes of examining foundation characteristics in relation to their size, the following resource classes have been used in this study: 1) assets of $10,000,000 and over; 2) assets of $1,000,000 to $9,999,999 or grants of $50,000 and over; 3) assets of $200,000 to $999,999 or grants of $10,000 to $49,999; 4) assets of less than $200,000 or grants of less than $10,000. The categories have been drawn, except for the largest, on either an asset or a grant basis in order to give proper position to the foundation established by living donors which characteristically spends more than it shows in assets.

Table 2 shows foundations and their latest reported assets by geographical location and resource class. It indicates that the 78 foundations with assets of $10 million or more possess $3.1 billion of the total. Foundations possessing $100 million and more in assets, listed below, have $1.5 billion.

The Ford Foundation	$493,213,842
The Rockefeller Foundation	447,686,573
Carnegie Corporation of New York	178,861,599
W. K. Kellogg Foundation	109,812,214
The Duke Endowment	109,552,000
The Commonwealth Fund	105,993,035
The Pew Memorial Foundation	104,987,129

The 640 foundations in the next resource class have another $1 billion in assets. Thus, 718 foundations, or less than 20 per cent of the total number, control $4.2 billion or 93 per cent of the resources.

The 3,311 small foundations have only $299 million or a little more than half of the $493 million belonging to the Ford Foundation alone.

Not only is the bulk of the resources in the hands of a few foundations but resources are concentrated in those geographical areas where the wealth is. Approximately 30 per cent of the foundations in the entire United States are situated in New York State, and 91 per cent of these are in New York City. Of the total reported assets, New York State has $2.5 billion or 55 per cent and New York City foundations possess 98 per cent of the amount in the state.

The fact that the headquarters of the Ford Foundation is in New York City, although the foundation is a Michigan corporation, and that the Duke Endowment has its principal office in New York City, although its giving is to Duke University, certain other specified colleges, and hospitals and orphanages in North and South Carolina, increases the assets of New York State by some $600 million. But even if these two foundations were included with those in the states where they were respectively incorporated and indentured, New York State would still possess only slightly less than $2 billion of the total resources.

The state having the next largest resources to New York is Pennsylvania which has $362 million, or eight per cent of the total foundation resources. Michigan is next with $309 million. Other states possessing more than $100 million in foundation resources in the order of their importance are Ohio, Texas, Illinois, California, and the District of Columbia. Figures for the District are weighted by the fact that the National Science Foundation is located there.

Use of the foundation's resources is determined in the letter of gift of the donor or in the mandate which he gives through the legal document of the foundation. The study produced information in the case of only 612 foundations as to whether the trustees have the right to spend both principal and income or whether their expenditures are limited entirely to income. However, the fact that such a large proportion of the newer foundations report gifts out of principal as well as gifts out of income, in their returns to the Internal Revenue Service, indicates that they must have the legal right to spend principal or what their accountants choose to term principal.

In the case of foundations capitalized at $10 million and more, information is more complete. Facts are available concerning 56, or 72 per cent, of the foundations. In this group, 37 foundations have the right to spend principal as well as income, 19 being limited to the use of income.

The study shows 16 foundations whose founders have limited their life to a specified term. The following list shows the states in which such foundations are located and the names of the foundations:

grants. Of $371 million spent by 3,795 foundations reporting expenditures, $313 million, or 84 per cent, was spent by 663 foundations with assets of $1 million and more or making grants of $50,000 and over. In the small resource categories, 1,253 foundations reported expenditures amounting to $32.4 million, the 1,869 in the smallest resource group spending only $10 million. Again, all the foundations with small resources spent, collectively, less than either the Ford Foundation or the Rockefeller Foundation.

Table 3 shows that foundations in New York led all others in disbursements. Expenditures reported by 1,178 of them totaled $193 million, 97 per cent of which was spent by New York City foundations. And these New York City foundations disbursed seven and one-quarter times as much as the state showing the next largest foundation expenditures, namely Pennsylvania, Ohio and Michigan followed in order, and other areas in which foundations spent more than $10 million were the District of Columbia, Illinois and Texas.

Foundation expenditures consist in the main of their grants to other organizations. This statement holds for both large and small foundations unless they are among the few which conduct their own operations. For example, the six largest foundations which report both expenditures and grants, made grants totalling $83,510,287 or 93 per cent of their expenditures which totaled $89,871,080.

The annual administrative expenses of small foundations are usually negligible. It is common to find a small family foundation either reporting no expenditures whatever, other than grants, or such expenses as the following: Checkbook printed, $1.72; Secretary of State's fee, $5.00; rental of safe deposit box, $10; stationery, $19.35; minute book, $9.17. When the family foundation has been recently organized and legal expense is involved, expenses of two or three hundred dollars may be reported. There are, of course, the exceptions among the small foundations, the most glaring one being the foundation which showed assets of $501, expenditures of $39,370, $11,000 of which was paid to the trustees. Such cases were found to be few in number, however, and appear to be the exceptions which prove the rule.

Table 3 shows that 3,764 foundations which reported grants gave away $308.6 million. Foundations in New York State again led those in all other states: 1,170 foundations reported grants amounting to $171 million, with New York City foundations accounting for 98 per cent of these grants. Michigan foundations followed, reporting $20 million in grants, and Pennsylvania foundations almost equaled these with grants of $19 million. Other areas accounting for significant portions of the total grants were Illinois, the District of Columbia, Ohio and Texas.

Table 4 shows that, as would be expected, the bulk of the grants came from foundations in the two largest resource classes. In these, 686 foundations reported grants amounting to $276 million or 89 per cent of the total of all grants of all foundations. The remaining 3,078 foundations with small resources gave away $33 million, approximately twice the amount distributed by the Rockefeller Foundation but still considerably under the gifts of the Ford Foundation.

Table 4 also correlates foundation grants with the type of legal purpose. It may be worthy of note that of the 2,222 foundations whose legal purposes are known and whose trustees also reported grants, $221 million or 71 per cent of the total was given away by foundations having a broad philanthropic purpose.

The study did not attempt to relate amounts of grants to scientific or service fields. Doing so was considered unsound; first, because the foundations themselves differ considerably in their categorization of the same and similar grantees; and second, because of the necessity for arbitrary classification when the foundation reported the names of grantees rather than fields.

Nature of Work

The study confirmed general knowledge that foundations tend to operate in one of three ways: they may make grants to other organizations or individuals; conduct research or service under their own auspices; or use both the grant-making and operating method.

While nearly all foundations are exclusively concerned with aiding the programs of other organizations, a number of important foundations conduct research or service. Among these may be cited Russell Sage Foundation which, until 1948, made grants. Since that time it has focused attention upon research designed to improve the "utilization of social research in professional practice" and on studies in philanthropy. The William Rockhill Nelson Trust conducts a gallery of art "for the enjoyment of the public generally." The largest of these operating foundations is the Carnegie Institution of Washington which conducts research in the physical and biological sciences and archaeology. The Richardson Foundation is in the process of converting from a grant-making to an operating foundation.

A few of the foundations which make grants also conduct operations. The Rockefeller Foundation and the Ford Foundation fall in this type, for while both of these foundations are principally concerned with the making of grants to other organizations, each incurs direct expenses for activities under its own auspices. Also in this group are the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, the Josiah Macy Jr. Foundation, and the Trexler Foundation.

The grant-making foundation whose purpose is limited has its work cut out by the founder. Examples include the Eugene Higgins Scientific Trust whose contributions for research in the physical sciences were limited in the donor's Will to Columbia, Harvard, Princeton and Yale Universities. The Association for the Aid of Crippled Children, as its name implies, confines its grants to the financing of research in behalf of the handicapped. The Edward W. Scripps Trust is a family trust whose gifts are limited to Science Service, Inc. and Miami University.

But 1,945 of the foundations studied were found to have broad philanthropic purposes, and all but a handful of these are of the grant-making type. The records reveal a very definite relation between the size of such a broad purpose foundation and the pattern of its grant-making.

Those which have assets amounting to $1 million and more or whose donors are channeling through them funds of sufficient size to enable them to make grants amounting to $50,000 or more annually, tend to seek a distinctive contribution in some chosen area. They fall into two general groups: those which seek to strengthen a particular field or fields of work through the support of research, demonstrations, experiments; and those which seek to strengthen institutions, communities or regions with which they have a personal or family tie.

It is the very largest foundations which concentrate upon the support of research and experimentation designed to advance the scientific disciplines or professional fields which they have chosen for attention. The trustees of such foundations engage professional staff[1] and the operation is not a passive one in which the trustees and officers wait for applications to be submitted, but rather an active search by the foundation for ways in which it may move toward the fundamental goal of the foundation. The project method was adopted some years ago by these foundations as a means of freeing their funds periodically for ever fresh approaches to their goals. Their giving is objective in relation to their chosen fields.

Exemplifying this type of program are the Carnegie Corporation which is seeking to promote the advancement and diffusion of knowledge through an attack upon specific problems in education and teaching, the social sciences, national and international affairs, and various areas of the world; the Rockefeller Foundation which aims to promote the well-being of mankind through support of significant undertakings in agriculture, biological and medical research, medical education and public health, the social sciences, and the humanities; the Commonwealth Fund which is seeking to serve the welfare of mankind through the advancement of medical education, the development of experimental health projects and medical research; the Markle Foundation which pursues the goal of human welfare by concerning itself chiefly with the advancement of medical education through the retention of able teachers in the medical schools; the Kellogg Foundation which is seeking the general welfare through the advancement of graduate and postgraduate medical education, dental education, nursing education, public health training, educational administration and agriculture; the Ford Foundation which is endeavoring to aid the public welfare by centering attention upon activities which contribute to its five program areas—education, public affairs, economic development and administration, the behavioral sciences (including mental health), and international peace and understanding.

When such foundations make out-of-program grants, it is the exceptional case.

Other large foundations seek their distinctive contribution through the strengthening of communities or institutions with which they are concerned. The virtual remaking of Allegheny County, Pennsylvania, spearheaded by the A. W. Mellon Educational and Charitable Trust and joined by the Falk Foundation, the Buhl Foundation, and the various Mellon family foundations, is the classic example in this category. Other outstanding examples were found in Texas where the Cullen Foundation and the M. D. Anderson Foundation, functioning jointly, effected the establishment of the Texas Medical Center in Houston, foundation grants serving as a catalytic agent for state and Federal funds many times larger. And the Fondren Foundation is largely responsible for the development of Southern Methodist University at Dallas. The Louis W. and Maud Hill Family Foundation is beginning such work in the Northwest.

Among foundation grants seeking to strengthen institutions with which their founders are or were personally concerned might be cited the Olin Foundation's aid to Cornell University, the Sloan Foundation grants to Massachusetts Institute of Technology, the Rubicon Foundation's grants to Vassar College, and the Lilly Endowment's support of the independent church-related colleges of Indiana. Several of these foundations also give to chosen fields.

The record shows a very different pattern followed by the 3,311 foundations in the study whose resources are not substantial. Doubtless because they do not have resources sufficient to permit them to seek some type of distinctive contribution, they seldom select specific fields for attention but rather give to causes with which they are familiar or which make effective appeals to them. Giving is, as a rule, subjective and is usually centered in the local area in which the foundation operates or in areas with which the founder or members of his family have a personal tie. In the case of foundations into which company funds are flowing, giving tends to center in areas where the company does business. Such foundations are not usually in a position to evaluate appeals. They seldom employ professional staff and the majority of them have no office apart from that of the founder, his attorney or his accountant. In other words, such foundations give more like individuals than like the larger, highly organized ones. Examples are legion. The record of almost any one of the smaller foundations would provide typical material.

Although the grants of the small foundations may be dwarfed in size by the dramatic gifts of the largest foundations, they fill an indispensable niche in the budgets of charitable, educational, religious and scientific institutions. Their annual gifts to operating budgets often make it possible to put into practice the results of the research and experimentation financed by the largest foundations. Similarly, their undesignated gifts often make it possible to maintain the expanded facilities provided through larger gifts. In short, there appears to be a triumvirate in which both large and small foundations and the institutions themselves collaborate. The larger foundations underwrite the research, basic and applied, or make the expansion of facilities possible; and the institutions conduct advanced practice and operate expanded plants with funds provided at least in part by the smaller foundations.

Community Foundations and Trusts

Community trusts had their start in Cleveland in 1914 when the Cleveland Foundation was established in the traditional pattern of a co-trusteeship under which the banks and the citizens administer endowments created to serve the changing needs of their community. Table 5 shows that the movement developed slowly. By 1940, only 62 of the presently existing community trusts had been established, with approximately one-third of them located in the North Central States and another third in New England and the Middle Atlantic States. This table also shows that there has been more than a 100 per cent increase in the number of such trusts since 1940. The growth took place principally in those sections of the country where the advantages of this type of foundation were understood, although the West North Central and South Atlantic States also experienced a substantial increase.

Community foundations are functionally the same as community trusts. They differ only structurally in that local banks are not necessarily involved. These entities did not begin to come upon the scene until the 1920's. During that decade, four were formed. Three more were established in the 1930's while 10 community trusts of the traditional pattern came into being. In the 1940's, however, 23 of each type were established, with assets totalling $7.6 million for the trusts and $6.1 million for the foundations. Thus far in the 1950's, trusts and foundations are again being established in almost equal numbers. Eleven trusts have come into being and nine foundations. Two trusts, one in Stamford, Connecticut, and the other in Norfolk, Virginia, having assets respectively of $172,498 and $544,453, account for the fact that the community trusts in the early part of this decade show assets of $860,525, or $662,252 more than the new community foundations.

The entire movement was given considerable impetus by the formation of the National Committee on Community Foundations and Trusts in 1949. This group has held a meeting annually for the past seven years, fostered the exchange of material between community foundations and communities considering their establishment, and published a handbook. All these factors have had a part in arousing interest in this medium for charitable and educational giving. But of special importance has been the effective work of a number of community trusts in interesting the legal profession in the advantages of this type of foundation. The progress they have made is evidenced by the fact that the leading article in the July 1955 issue of the American Bar Association Journal is, "The Community Trust: A Service Opportunity for Charitable Trusts."

The establishment by some community foundations and trusts of a "General Fund" into which citizens of small means can place charitable contributions has brought this type of foundation closer to the public. Again, in their own respective ways, a number of community foundations and trusts are counselling family foundations, doubtless in the hope of being named successor trustee. The Minnesota Foundation actually provides administrative services to family foundations on a contractual basis. As successor trustees community foundations and trusts can aid in mitigating the social dangers inherent in the multiplication of small foundations lacking resources for the conduct of long term programs.

The study covered 128 community foundations and trusts. The assets shown by 114 of these totaled $127.4 million, and the grants made by 90 of them in the latest year reported aggregated $6.8 million. The regional distribution of the 114 foundations and trusts which reported assets follows:

Permanent Charity Fund, Boston ...	12,589	562
Chicago Community Trust	12,039	640

Fields of interest of community foundations and trusts were found to be confined, as a rule, to the needs of the local area although by most of them funds can be applied in any area designated by the donor. Unlike the community chest, however, the concern of the community foundation encompasses educational and cultural aspects of local community needs as well as health and welfare. A number of community foundations and trusts emphasize the importance of planned, purposeful giving through which capital needs of local organizations may be met, and such community trusts avoid using their resources to meet agency deficits.

Fields of Current Interest

The study revealed fields of interest of 2,510 foundations predicated on specific mention of the field in the foundation's purpose, a foundation report of a current interest in that field, or a record of a grant of $1,000 or more to an organization classifiable in the field. For all resource classes, the distribution of sources was as follows: Purpose only, 423 foundations or 17 per cent; purpose and reported current interest, 209 or eight per cent; current interest only, 411 or 16 per cent; purpose and nature of grants, 199 or eight per cent; nature of gants only, 1,268 or 51 per cent. All fields of foundation interest so revealed have been indexed except those pertaining to the smallest foundations.

However, the report by a foundation that it is currently interested in a given field is the only fully reliable source. Many foundations make specific mention of a field in their purposes but take no steps to implement their legal rights. Moreover, many make grants to organizations in a given field not because the field has been selected for attention but because of an effective appeal by an exempt organization. In certain instances, the fact of a foundation's having made a grant indicates the discharge of an obligation and therefore may be taken to have implications of writing off that field. In view of this situation and the questionable value of mention of a field in the purpose or record of a grant as sources of knowledge regarding field of interest, this discussion is limited to what the study revealed regarding reported current interests of foundations.

The following lists speak for themselves. Social welfare is the leading field of interest of all foundations in all resource classes except the largest. Education and its various sub-divisions come next. If it were sound to relate amounts granted to specific fields, education would unquestionably be found to be receiving the highest percentage of foundation gifts. The prominence of fellowships and scholarships in every class, and the fact that the largest number of foundations with $10 million and over in assets mentioned it, is evidence of the consuming interest of foundations in finding able individuals and helping them to develop their talents to the full, to the end of equipping them for leadership of society.

The fact that the giving of aid to needy persons is at the mid-point in the list dealing with all foundations, and appears in all lists except that for the largest foundations, may be explained in two ways: First, many of the smaller foundations which contain company funds are often concerned with aiding needy employees or former employees of the company; second, many family foundations show concern for needy individuals in their communities with whom they are well acquainted.

The emphasis of the largest foundations on the financing of research is evidenced by more attention to the social sciences than social welfare and by the concern for medical research.

Of note also is the lack of denominational limitation in the fields chosen by the largest foundations. The fact that the religious denominations have a high position in the lists pertaining to smaller foundations is evidence that these foundations give more like individuals than like organized foundations.

Those who have deplored the lack of foundation support for the humanities can take heart from the relative prominence of it in the chosen interests of foundations in all resource categories.

In the entire group of 4,164 foundations studied, 620, or 15 per cent, reported their current interests. These are listed below in descending order, together with the number of foundations concerned with each.

Of the 2,001 smallest foundations, 216 or 11 per cent reported the choosing of fields for current attention. Their choices should be taken to mean an interest in such fields as they are related to the area in which the foundation operates or to institutions and areas in which the founder or members of his family are interested. In the case of foundations into which company funds are flowing, reported current interests usually apply to communities in which the company may be doing business. The report of the interests of these foundations is contained in the following list:

The fact that the percentages of foundations reporting their current interests decreases as the size of the foundation decreases is related not only to the fact that replies were received from a larger percentage of the foundations with substantial resources, but also to the fact that the smaller foundations, which constitute the majority of those covered in the study, do not as a rule select specific fields for attention.

GUIDE TO FOUNDATION DESCRIPTIONS

Readers of the foundation descriptions which follow should understand at the outset that they do not comprise a directory of all foundations in existence today.[1] Reference to foundations known to be in existence, but about which it was not possible to procure descriptive data, has been made by name only. Also mentioned in this manner are foundations whose existence has been a matter of public knowledge but which are known to have become inactive, been liquidated or reached the end of their terms.

Foundation descriptions have been arranged geographically. They appear in alphabetical order in the states in which the principal office of the foundation or chief agent is located. A geographical presentation was chosen instead of a straight alphabetical one because it is the best means of reflecting the highly local and regional interests of the vast majority of foundations included.

Content of Descriptions

Completeness of the foundation descriptions varies considerably depending upon the amount of material obtained. The aim was to have each description cover the following items: Name and address, legal structure, date of establishment, donor or donors, purpose, character of gift, geographical limitations, methods, policies regarding grants, current fields of interest, financial data, and officers and trustees.

In general, a full description means that the foundation replied to our request for amplification of its public records. However, it cannot be assumed that a brief description implies lack of cooperation, inasmuch as many of the smaller family and company foundations have not developed clearly defined policies or chosen specific fields of interest. Therefore, the total range of items was not applicable to them.

An enumeration of certain policies affecting the drafting of descriptions may help the reader make more effective use of the material contained in them.

> Address—communication to the foundation at the address given, sent by first class mail shortly before publication, and not returned, has been taken to mean that the address is correct.

[1] See INTRODUCTION

Legal Structure and Date of Establishment—all pertinent legal information obtained has been included. When none was available, the approximate date of the foundation's establishment has been computed by subtracting 15 months from the date of the exemption letter when this was reported on the foundation's 990-A return.

Donor—reference to a single donor does not imply a sole donor but rather the only one reported in available documents.

Purpose—where obtained, legal purposes have been carried verbatim unless the length made condensation necessary. In a number of cases the only information procured was that the purpose was of a broad philanthropic nature.

Character of Gift—when information concerning the right of the trustees to spend income only or income and/or principal was contained in the legal documents, this information has been included in the condensation of the foundation's purpose. The classification of a foundation as a "perpetuity" should be taken to mean nothing more than that the trustees have reported that they may spend only the income. Classification as a "discretionary perpetuity" means that the trustees have reported that they may spend the principal as well as the income but are not required to do so. Classification of a foundation as "a limited life foundation" means that the trustees have reported that the foundation is required to spend its entire funds, principal as well as income, by a given date. Wherever possible, in such cases, the date of the end of the term of that foundation is also given.

Limitations—where a foundation's activity is limited to a local community or to a state, this fact has been repeated in the item "Limitations" even if the limitation has been stated previously in the purpose.

Methods—Information regarding methods has not been included unless reported by the foundation. However, a foundation's methods are often made clear in other parts of the description.

Policies Regarding Grants—this item has not been carried in any description unless reported by the foundation.

Current Fields of Interest—this item likewise has not been included unless reported by the foundation.

Financial Data—all foundations were asked to furnish asset, expenditure, and grant figures at least as current as those for 1953 or 1954, if available. However, 1,916 foundations did not bring our printer's copy up to date. In the case of such noncooperating foundations, located in states where it was impractical to make second transcriptions of the returns to the Treasury Department, readers will find that the financial data pertain to earlier years. Assets are reported as of the beginning of the fiscal year unless the figure is followed by a dagger, in which case they apply to the end of the fiscal year.[1] Small assets do not necessarily imply insignificance. The typical family or company foundation reports grants exceeding assets. A few such foundations whose assets are in the form of mortgaged property show a net deficit in their balance sheets.

Expenditures include grants and are those made during the fiscal year reported. Grants also are those made during the fiscal year. If the foundation reported separately its grants out of income and grants out of principal, this pattern has been copied in the descriptions in order to show that the foundation classes as "principal" the contributions it has received.

Nature of Grants—this item does not appear when the foundation has reported current fields of interest, inasmuch as the latter more truly reflect the foundation's fields. In the absence of knowledge of current interests, the nature of grants, as revealed by the general categories of grants reported by the foundation on the face of its return, has been given in the description. When the foundation included attachments listing organizations to which grants had been made, appropriate classification of such organizations by 47 major fields of foundation interest has been attempted.

Officers and Trustees—complete lists of officers and trustees are given whenever available. Otherwise there are included as many of the officers and trustees as are known to be serving at the present time. When no names of current officers and trustees are available, but names of original directors or incorporators are known, they have been carried in order to provide information concerning the persons responsible for the establishment of the foundation. It must be understood that original directors or incorporators may not be alive and that certain incorporators may be "dummies."

[1] Form 990-A carries a balance sheet as of the beginning of the year and since it was the principal source of financial information, it was decided to conform to the pattern established therein.

Use of Indices

When the reader does not find a description of a foundation in which he is interested in the state where he believes it is located, he should consult the alphabetical Index of Foundation Names. It may be that the foundation is described with those of another state. In view of this alphabetical index, cross referencing of a foundation incorporated in one state but described in the state where now located did not appear necessary.

Readers concerned with special interests should consult the Index of Fields. Numbers following any field are the serial numbers of the foundations. By referring to the serial number in the Index of Foundation Names, the reader may locate the exact foundations concerned with the field in which he is interested.

Indexing of foundations by fields of interest has been carried out on one or more of the following objective bases:

1. Specific mention of the field in the foundation's purpose. (The terms charitable, educational, religious, scientific, and literary in broad purposes of foundations have not been indexed when they are a part of a broad, general purpose.)
2. A report by the foundation of a current interest in the field.
3. A record of a grant of $1,000 or over by the foundation to an organization classifiable in the field.

Small family and company foundations whose assets were less than $200,000 or which were making annual grants amounting to less than $10,000 have been specifically excluded from field of interest indexing. Such foundations are known to be set up in the main for broad purposes and to engage principally in local philanthropic giving. Therefore, it can be assumed that the fact of their having given to a Protestant church or a local home for the aged does not necessarily imply the selection of the field of Protestant religion or care of the aged for specific attention.

Mention of a field in a broad purpose has certain value, but a report by a foundation that it is currently interested in a certain field is the only truly satisfactory basis of knowledge of a foundation's interests. Classification of foundations on the basis of fields covered by their grants has two serious weaknesses: First, the classification involves an arbitrary decision as to the field in which the recipient organization is to be placed; second, although the foundation has made a grant to an organization in a certain field, it may never make another such grant and the fact of the grant may not therefore signify either a current or permanent interest. However, inasmuch as nature of grants was often the only source of information regarding a foundation's interests, indexing of all but the smallest foundations on this basis has been carried out. Nevertheless, the reader is cautioned against giving too much weight to such index items.

Selective Use of Material

Readers who are examining this material with a view to selecting foundations which might possibly aid organizations or projects with which they are concerned, should note that at the end of the descriptions for each state the following sentence appears—PLEASE USE THIS DIRECTORY SELECTIVELY—NOT AS A LIST. This request has been placed throughout the edition because of the very serious waste which is involved in indiscriminate appeals to foundations.[1] Those who are seeking foundation assistance usually secure no funds through such appeals. The only result is annoyance to the foundations who are approached for aiding programs and projects outside the fields of their interest, and the unfortunate corollary that they become more reticent in cooperating with reference works such as this, thus making it more difficult for those who wish to approach foundations to obtain the greatest possible information about them.

HOOD–CHARLES H. HOOD DAIRY FOUNDATION

500 Rutherford Avenue
Boston 29, Massachusetts

Incorporated in New Hampshire in 1942. Donor: Charles H. Hood.

Purpose: To make grants which will provide the greatest benefit to the dairy farmers of New England, the greatest benefit toward enhancing the health of New England children, and activities which are for the benefit of the employees of H. P. Hood and Sons and their families and particularly their children.

Limitations: The Foundation is more interested in projects relating to New England than other sections of the country.

Methods: Grants to other organizations, fellowships, scholarships.

Policies Regarding Grants: The Foundation is more interested in child health projects, including mental health, which have to do with prevention rather than cure, and in research and education for the general advancement of child health, rather than assistance or relief for individual needy cases. It is more interested in stimulating research in new fields than in already tested fields, and is particularly interested in supporting projects in a way which will encourage additional contributions on the part of others. It does not contribute to building funds, endowments, regular budgets or accumulated deficits, and does not contribute to fund-raising campaigns which are generally subscribed to by the public. Applications for grants must be submitted prior to October 1 for

ROCKEFELLER BROTHERS FUND, INC.

30 Rockefeller Plaza
New York 20, N. Y.

A discretionary perpetuity incorporated in New York in 1940. Donors: John D. Rockefeller Jr., David Rockefeller, John D. Rockefeller 3rd, Laurance S. Rockefeller, Nelson A. Rockefeller, Winthrop Rockefeller.

Purpose: Application to charitable purposes of the income, and if the corporation so decides, the principal, as the corporation may from time to time possess.

Methods: Grants to other organizations.

Policies Regarding Grants: In the Greater New York area the Fund contributes to agencies serving many different community needs —civic improvement, cultural advancement, education, health, religion, and welfare. As a general rule its contributions are to agencies of city-wide significance since it cannot, because of the number involved, contribute directly to such organizations as individual hospitals, churches, community centers, and schools. The same principle is followed in the State of New York where it contributes to agencies whose services are state-wide.

Outside of New York State its grants are directed to selected organizations with programs of general import. For the most part these organizations are national or international in scope, but occasionally an institution whose primary significance is local in character may be the center of a particular program which the Fund assists because it relates to a broad geographic area or a field of particular interest to the Fund.

In the case of grants to the budgetary or capital needs of established agencies, the Fund's contributions are purposely held to a relatively small proportion of the total need since the objective of the Fund in this area is to share with others in support of such institutions.

In the case of grants to projects in which the Fund has a special interest, it is prepared to contribute a larger percentage of the total need and in some cases to assume not only major or full financial responsibility but also possibly a measure of operating responsibility.

Current Fields of Interest: Aesthetics, agriculture and rural life, children, city and regional planning, conservation of natural resources, democracy and citizenship, economics, higher education, secondary education, Negro education, religious education, health and medicine, humanities, intercultural relations, international matters, religion (all faiths), social sciences, social welfare, youth.

Financial Data (year ended December 31, 1954): Total assets, $59,874,779; total expenditures, $1,502,253; grants out of income, $693,204; grants out of principal, $729,239.

Trustees: Detlev W. Bronk, Wallace K. Harrison, David Rockefeller, John D. Rockefeller 3rd, Laurance S. Rockefeller, Nelson A. Rockefeller, Winthrop Rockefeller.

Officers: John D. Rockefeller 3rd, President; Laurance S. Rockefeller, Vice-President; Dana S. Creel, Director; Robert C. Bates, Secretary; Philip F. Keebler, Treasurer; John E. Lockwood, Counsel.

ROCKEFELLER FOUNDATION, THE

49 West 49th Street
New York 20, N. Y.

A discretionary perpetuity chartered in New York in 1913. Donor: John D. Rockefeller.

Purpose: To promote the well-being of mankind throughout the world.

Methods: Grants to other organizations, travel grants, fellowships, conduct of research.

Policies Regarding Grants: Grants are made primarily to universities, colleges, research institutes and other qualified tax-exempt agencies conducting work within the scope of the Foundation's program. The operating programs in public health and agriculture are in most instances carried on in cooperation with foreign governments. The Foundation does on principle decline requests (1) to give or lend money for personal aid to individuals; (2) to invest in securities on a philanthropic rather than a business basis; (3) to appraise or subsidize cures or inventions; (4) to finance altruistic movements involving private profit; (5) to support propaganda; (6) to contribute to the establishment or to building and operating funds of local hospitals, churches, schools, libraries or welfare agencies.

Current Fields of Interest: Agriculture, biological and medical research, medical education and public health, social sciences, humanities.

Financial Data (year ended December 31, 1954): Total uncommitted assets, $447,686,573‡ (market value); total expenditures, $17,198,896; total grants, $17,127,813.

TWENTIETH CENTURY FUND, INC., THE

330 West 42nd Street
New York 36, N. Y.

A discretionary perpetuity chartered by the Legislature of Massachusetts in 1919. Donor: Edward A. Filene.

Purpose: For the improvement of economic, industrial, civic, and educational conditions.

Methods: Conduct of research dealing with current economic and social problems and public education activities designed to make the findings available to the widest possible audience. Special research staffs are retained to prepare factual reports on current, and often controversial, issues such as agricultural policies, labor relations, distribution costs and methods, old-age security, international relations, foreign trade, import policies, cartel and monopoly programs, America's needs and resources, world population, production and commerce, antitrust policies and enforcement and others.

For each major survey, the Trustees often appoint a special committee of qualified persons representing different viewpoints on the question at issue to review the research report and recommend a program for action in the public interest. The Fund itself takes no stand on the survey findings and has no platform or program to promote. The combined research and committee reports are published by the Fund in book form.

The Fund devotes special attention to distributing its reports to the public and to making the findings readily available. It prepares press releases, special magazine articles, popular pamphlets, and periodic newsletters based on its surveys, and produces motion pictures, arranges radio and television presentations, and works with other organizations to reach as many people as possible throughout the country.

Policies Regarding Grants: As a general rule (established in 1937-38) the Fund uses its resources solely for its own program of research and public education in the field of economic and social problems.

Current Fields of Interest: Aged, agriculture and rural life, city and regional planning, conservation of natural resources, economics, adult education (general public), employer-employee relations, international matters, social sciences.

Financial Data (year ended December 31, 1954): Total assets, $9,655,559 (market value); total expenditures, $723,591; single grant for special project, $200,000.

MELLON—THE A. W. MELLON EDUCATIONAL AND CHARITABLE TRUST

525 William Penn Place
Pittsburgh 30, Pennsylvania

Established in 1930 by Deed of Trust. Donor: Andrew W. Mellon. The Trustees have set the period 1960-1965 as the probable termination date.

Purpose: To aid such religious, charitable, scientific, literary or educational purposes as the Trustees judge shall be in furtherance of the public welfare and tend to promote the well-doing or well-being of mankind. The Donor requested the Trustees to give careful consideration to the needs of those institutions in which he had manifested special interest or to which he directed the Trustees' attention.

Methods: Grants to other organizations and institutions only. There is no operating or service program.

Policies Regarding Grants: In 1946, the Trustees announced that the remaining assets of the Trust would be devoted, so far as practicable, to projects in the Pittsburgh area. At the same time, they decided upon a policy of distributing all the assets of the Trust, both principal and income, within approximately fifteen years. Grants are not made to individuals; not made to organizations which normally raise their funds through public campaigns or are judged to have a broad basis of public support; and not made to the usual building, endowment, or other fund-raising campaigns of established organizations.

Current Fields of Interest: Civic activities, including city and regional planning, conservation and redevelopment; liberal arts education; and cultural activities, including the fine arts, music and drama in the Pittsburgh area.

APPENDICES

APPENDIX A

METHOD OF RESEARCH

The unexpected inclusion of Part IV in Title III of HR 8920 (Public Law 814, 81st Congress, Chapter 994, 2nd Session) outmoded methods used in all previous surveys of foundations. In this section of the 1950 Revenue Act, the Congress ordered the Secretary of the Treasury to make available for public inspection the balance sheets of private foundations and trusts. Thus ended, at least for the time being, the era of privacy for foundations with respect to their financial data.

When plans for the Seventh Edition of AMERICAN FOUNDATIONS AND THEIR FIELDS were initiated in the spring of 1951, the first order of business was to determine whether it was feasible to base the book upon the newly available information. By this time, T.D. 5838 (the regulation issued by the Treasury Department to implement Title III, Part IV, of the Act) had been published. Under it, foundations and trusts were required to file new forms, each of which made provision for a copy to remain in the Internal Revenue District Office where the public could examine it. Foundations exempt under section 101(6)[1] of the 1939 Internal Revenue Code were required to file Form 990-A; and trusts claiming unlimited deductions under section 162(a)[2] of the 1939 Code, Form 1041-A.

The wisdom of the Treasury's decision to make these returns available locally, rather than in Washington, was accepted. But the contemplation of covering the 64 Internal Revenue Districts in order to inspect Forms 900-A and 1041-A was almost overwhelming. In the spirit of carpe diem, lest opportunity not knock again, it was decided to undertake the task.

On May 22, 1951, two weeks after the first returns became available, experimentation began in the Second and Third Internal Revenue Districts in New York. Two values resulted.

In the first place, it became immediately clear that the only satisfactory method for transcription of the returns on a nation-wide scale would be photographic. Accordingly, a call was made upon the Commissioner of Internal Revenue in Washington and on June 26 permission to take simple photographic equipment into each Revenue Office was obtained. Although microfilming of the records was considered, the method was not adopted due to the difficulties involved in transporting the machine and also because the total number of records, although large, was insufficient to warrant the use of this process.

[2] 1954 Revenue Code, section 642(c).

Except in Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, North Dakota, South Dakota, Montana, and Idaho, where the number of foundations was small enough for manual copying to be practical, all transcriptions of returns on Forms 990-A and 1041-A were made with a camera by our field representatives. In the above named states, the manual transcriptions were made for us by local notaries public.

The second value growing out of experimentation in New York City was the observation that the information contained in the public's copy of Forms 990-A and 1041-A was meager, to say the least. The original of Form 990-A, which is sent to Washington, contains a brief statement of the nature of the foundation's activities, the year of its establishment, reference to its legal structure, the names of two responsible officers, a detailed list of the grants made during the year covered by the return, and a detailed list of all donors making gifts during the year amounting to $3,000 [1] or more. In contrast, the copy available for inspection in the District Offices contains no names, may or may not have a copy of the list of grants and the list of donors, since the inclusion of these attachments is optional with the foundation, and contains information concerning the other items reported on the original only if the position of the carbon results in their visibility. Moreover, many of the smaller foundations leave the balance sheet blank, merely reporting their income and expenditures.

In the case of Form 1041-A, the names of two responsible officers do appear on the public's copy. However, the inclusion of the detailed list of grants made is optional and in the case of many such returns no list is attached to the copy in the District Office.

Where the files of American Foundations Information Service already contained legal and other information about the foundations whose returns to the Treasury Department were transcribed, it was possible to piece together at least a minimum basic description. This observation led to a decision to photograph, following the visit to the Internal Revenue District Office, the corporation papers, or pertinent portions of them, of foundations of appreciable size whose legal documents were not already on file. Through this means, such information as date of establishment, the names of persons responsible for creating the foundation, its purpose, geographical limitations, legal term of existence, and provisions regarding the spending of income and/or principal was obtained.

In the case of charitable trusts, except testamentary trusts, information like that procured on corporate foundations was almost impossible to obtain.[2] Hence, when the cooperation of trustees of inter vivos trusts was not forthcoming, the "cold" figures revealed by Form 990-A or Form 1041-A had to suffice. Basic facts concerning noncooperating testamentary trusts were procured by transcribing pertinent portions of the Wills under which they were created.

[2] See INTRODUCTION, Legal Structure.

The broadening of the study to include the transcription of available legal documents of foundations and trusts as well as their returns to the Treasury Department meant that the 48 State Capitols, or appropriate State Offices, had to be visited in addition to the 64 Revenue Offices. Although previous editions of this book have covered those Canadian foundations whose trustees and officers voluntarily cooperated, it appeared impractical to extend the scope of the Seventh Edition beyond the United States and the Territory of Hawaii. The Atkinson Charitable Foundation and other Canadian foundations with which a cooperative relationship has been established were most willing to furnish descriptive data, but the number of such descriptions would have been too small to reflect a correct picture of the foundation movement in Canada.[1] Likewise, since information was available on only one of the two trusts located in Alaska, this Territory was omitted from coverage.

The difficulty of financing the work resulted in the necessity of spending approximately two and one-half years to complete the transcriptions. Therefore, to insure currency of material, second transcriptions were made wherever feasible in areas containing a significant number of foundations. It is regrettable that this practice could not have been followed in Ohio and California.

There were, however, certain advantages in the fact that the research extended over a relatively long period of time. Records were obtained on both those foundations which filed for the year 1950 only, as well as on the many hundreds of foundations established in 1951 and 1952, whose returns did not become due until 1952 and 1953 respectively.

Because of the fact that many of the foundations established by the larger corporations were too new for their 990-A's or 1041-A's to have become available, an inquiry was sent to all corporations listed by the Federal Trade Commission in its latest report [2] as capitalized at $50 million and over. Replies were received from only a small number of corporations which had established foundations and these were followed up for more detailed information. In addition, a personalized letter was sent to the president of each corporation reliably reported to have established a foundation in 1952 or subsequently, but again the response was not gratifying. This was doubtless due to the fact that reference could not be made to a transcript of the foundation's return to the Treasury Department being in our files. Throughout the research, there appeared to be a high correlation between a foundation's cooperation and the fact that information had already been obtained from its public records. When cooperation could not be secured, at least the legal purpose and names of responsible officers were obtained in the case of important foundations which had been incorporated.

[2] "A List of 1000 Large Manufacturing Companies, Their Subsidiaries and Affiliates, 1948." Federal Trade Commission, 1951.

The splendid cooperation received from officials in both the Internal Revenue District Offices and the State Capitols greatly lightened the burden of our field representatives and made their task a pleasant one. However, transscribing each type of document had its difficulties.

The 990-A's pertaining to foundations and trusts had to be sorted out of all such returns filed by organizations required under section 54(f) of the 1939 Code [1] to file an annual return showing gross income, receipts and disbursements and other required information. This section applies to all organizations exempt under section 101 [2] of the 1939 Code except the following: Religious organizations, charitable and educational organizations conducted by religious organizations, and religious orders; fraternal orders; charitable organizations wholly or partially supported by tax funds or primarily by contributions from the general public; educational organizations engaging in the formal instruction of a student body by a regular faculty; corporations and their subsidiaries wholly owned by the United States or its instrumentality. Therefore, the total number filed in each District Office was many times the number applying to foundations and trusts. Indeed the portion of returns pertinent to this research varied from a low of 15 per cent in some Revenue Districts to a high of 50 per cent in others.

The passage of Public Law 35 in the summer of 1951 greatly curtailed the number of Forms 1041-A which were filed. This law amended section 153(b) of the 1939 Internal Revenue Code [3] so as to make this subsection inapplicable "in the case of a taxable year if all the net income for such year determined under the applicable principles of the law of trusts is required to be distributed currently to the beneficiaries." From the standpoint of the research, this was a boon inasmuch as it made it unnecessary to screen out small trusts which would not have met specifications because they were created to assist specified local beneficiaries.

The photographing of the legal documents presented problems rooted principally in the fact that the documents were filed, in many instances, in bound books and considerable ingenuity was demanded of our photographers in order to secure a good shot.

The final tally showed that the research had produced approximately 25,000 transcriptions pertaining to 6,152 legal entities. The only State in which no transcriptions could be made for lack of pertinent material was Montana. This is not to say that the State of Montana has no foundations but rather that those organizations filing a return on Form 990-A did not meet the specifications for inclusion in the publications of American Foundations Information Service.

[2] 1954 Revenue Code, section 501.

[3] 1954 Revenue Code, sections 6034, 6071, 6081(b), 6091(a).

In view of the fact that previous editions of American Foundations and Their Fields had rested entirely, except for reference to nonreplying foundations, upon material voluntarily furnished by the trustees of the foundations, it was decided at the outset of the study to apprise the trustees of each foundation of the material which had been obtained from public records and ask them to amplify it. A basic letter identical with or similar to the one reproduced herein was sent to each foundation whose records were transcribed, together with an enclosed questionnaire, also reproduced, for obtaining further details. Foundations covered during 1952 received a somewhat less complete form but, except for the fact that total expenditures were not requested, the principal items were the same.

Results were gratifying. Whereas requests sent to the newer family and company foundations in 1950 and 1951 had never produced a response greater than 10 per cent, cooperation was received from 25 per cent of this newer group in the current study. The older foundations which had cooperated in the six previous surveys did so in the present one with a few exceptions.

Where the 990-A return or other public records indicated that there might be doubt whether the foundation would meet specifications, a different letter was sent stating the specifications and asking the trustees to [1] answer a question which would resolve the doubt. Such letters resulted in establishing the fact that 1,284 of the foundations whose records had been transcribed did not qualify for inclusion.

The following tabulation reflects the categorical distribution of the replies:

Total number of legal entities whose trustees were asked to amplify material obtained		5,682
Foundations furnishing additional information	1,214
Foundations meeting specifications but not replying	2,948
Foundations reporting inactivity or dissolution	114
Foundations not meeting specifications	1,284
Inquiries undeliverable	122
Forms 1041-A relating to small trusts not followed up because grants appeared to be for the benefit of specified organizations		470
Total number of foundation records obtained		6,152

Trustees of
John Doe Foundation
4600 Blank Street
Metropolis 6, Indiana

Gentlemen:

Your foundation is among those to be described shortly in our service.

As you may know, we have, for the past fifteen years, conducted research dealing with the organization and operation of American foundations. The majority of important foundations not only give us their full cooperation, but also make extensive use of our services. We feel no hesitancy in referring you to any one of them for an appraisal of our work.

The information now in our files concerning your foundation is summarized in the enclosed bulletin, which is based on your latest 990-A return to the Treasury Department and other official records. But this does not tell your whole story. Facts about what your foundation cannot and does not do as well as what it can and does do are most important.

Therefore we hope you will fill in the enclosed standard form which we use to record foundation data. We would like you to return to us the white copy. The blue is for your own files.

We shall delay coverage of your foundation until September 24, 1953, by which time we trust you will either have returned our form or notified us when we may expect to hear from you.

Very sincerely yours,

Wilmer Shields Rich

Director

The first two categories constitute the 4,162 foundations described herein.

Final preparation of the foundation descriptions for this volume was based on one or more of four sources. The majority rests upon the transcriptions of the returns to the Internal Revenue Service. An appreciable proportion of these also contain material transcribed from legal documents. Many have been augmented through press clippings from dailies of major cities throughout the country which yielded information concerning names of new trustees released by foundations, reported the probating of Wills, announced bequests to foundations, mentioned changes in the headquarters of foundations, and announced gifts to foundations by living founders. But most important was the amplification which resulted from supplementary information supplied by the foundations themselves.

Following a policy established when the first edition of this book was published by The Twentieth Century Fund in 1930, descriptions of all cooperating foundations were submitted, in advance of being sent to the printer, to the trustees. Also submitted, in the case of this edition, were descriptions of foundations having assets of $1 million and more, or making grants in the latest year on record of $50,000 or more, as well as descriptions of foundations on which no recent public records had been obtained, i.e., all those whose records bore dates prior to 1952, and finally, descriptions of foundations which had requested omission.

The following tabulation gives the detail:

Total number of descriptions submitted to foundations		2,976
Descriptions approved without change	92
Descriptions changed and enlarged	862
Foundations reported dissolved or inactive	14
Foundations requesting omission from the book	54
Unanswered	1,916
Undelivered	38

Despite the fact that circular letters accompanying the clearances had stated specifically that no material obtained from the public records would be omitted from this publication, 54 foundations answered the submission of our printer's copy by saying that they did not wish to be included. So that their trustees would not be surprised when the book was published containing a description of the foundation, each such foundation received a brief, hand-typed reply stating finally that it was not possible to grant the request and that information obtained from documents which were a matter of public record would be included.

The final step in the research was the analysis of the material. The following matters were coded for the purpose of mechanical tabulation: Date of establishment, legal structure, character of gift, fact of company donor, type of purpose (broad or limited), nature of giving (general philanthropic, local philanthropic, other), financial data (assets, expenditures including grants, grants), and 47 fields of interest, including three age groups. In the case of each of these fields, coding was done in such a manner as to indicate whether the interest was known by mention in the legal purpose, a reported current interest, or a record of a grant.

Early in the study, the plan had been that all financial data would be related to one base year. However, the number of years consumed in completing the research forced us to the pragmatic approach of recording the latest financial data which we could obtain. Descriptions of noncooperating foundations covered early in the research and located in states where no second transcriptions were made contain financial data for the fiscal year ended in 1951, and in a few instances for the year ended in 1950. It would obviously have been pointless in 1954 to transcribe 1951 returns of foundations whose 1953 returns had become available. Moreover, nearly all cooperating foundations reported their latest figures. Again it would have been senseless to ask them to give figures for two years earlier in order to hold to a theoretically sound base year. Thus it is not possible to say that the financial data reported in this study reflect the assets, expenditures and grants of foundations for any one year. Rather do they give a picture of foundation resources and expenditures in the latest year available.

APPENDIX B

SAMPLE LEGAL DOCUMENTS

The forms under which three actual foundations have been organized are given here for purposes of illustration. The actual organization of a new foundation should be entrusted to a competent attorney who is familiar with the laws of the State where the foundation is being organized, and who understands the exact aims and purposes of the founder, since it is not safe to follow any form blindly.

ARTICLES OF ASSOCIATION
OF
THE A FOUNDATION

KNOW ALL MEN BY THESE PRESENTS:

That we, the undersigned, for the purpose of forming a corporation under the laws of the State of Missouri, relating to benevolent, religious, scientific, educational and miscellaneous associations under Article 10, Chapter 33 of the Revised Statutes of Missouri, as amended, in association with others have entered into the following agreement:

ARTICLE I

The name of this association shall be:

THE A FOUNDATION

ARTICLE II

The principal office of the A Foundation until otherwise provided shall be in Kansas City, Jackson County, Missouri.

ARTICLE III

1. The association is organized not for gain or profit but exclusively for the following educational, charitable, civic, scientific and philanthropic purposes:

(a) To promote the health, welfare, happiness and development of children of school age, particularly in the counties of Jackson and Clay in the State of Missouri, and the counties of Wyandotte and Johnson in the State of Kansas, and to promote the advancement and diffusion of knowledge and understanding of business management and administration among students attending educational institutions in such areas and elsewhere.

(b) To promote by all lawful means the habits of thrift, savings and self-dependence among all classes of people without discrimination due to or owing to race, color or creed.

(c) To promote research, discovery, instruction and education relating to scientific, industrial, educational or social advancement and progress.

(d) To promote public welfare by aiding needy, distressed or physically or mentally disabled persons or individuals.

(e) To promote, and engage in activities for the improvement of public health and the advancement of social welfare.

2. The association for the carrying out in whole or in part of the foregoing educational, charitable, civic, scientific and philanthropic purposes shall be and is authorized and empowered as follows:

(a) To receive, acquire and administer funds and other property, real, personal or mixed, donated or left to it by corporations, associations, individuals or others for one or more of such educational, charitable, civic, scientific and philanthropic uses and purposes.

(b) To receive and take by deed or devise in its corporate capacity any property, real, personal or mixed, granted to it in trust or otherwise for educational, charitable, civic, scientific or philanthropic purposes, and to execute and administer trusts so created, the purposes and objects of which are educational, charitable, civic, scientific and philanthropic.

(c) To hold, sell, lease or invest property, real, personal or mixed, in its possession and for the purposes aforesaid.

(d) To execute deeds, contracts, agreements and obligations, the purposes of which are consonant with the laws of the State of Missouri under which this foundation is organized and in furtherance of the uses and purposes hereinbefore set forth.

(e) To disburse principal or income for the charitable, educational, civic, scientific and philanthropic purposes aforesaid.

(f) To accomplish or further the accomplishment of any or all of the purposes hereinbefore set out directly by and through independent activities conducted by this association or by and through grants of general or special assistance to existing public or private non-profit agencies, institutions or instrumentalities organized and maintained for and engaged exclusively in educational, charitable, civic, scientific, research and philanthropic activities.

(g) To employ for the accomplishment of the purposes hereinbefore set forth such persons and facilities as the Trustees may, in their discretion, deem necessary and expedient.

3. This association shall not be maintained or operated, directly or indirectly for private gain or profit and no part of the net income shall inure to the benefit of the members thereof, nor shall it engage in or utilize any part of its resources in any attempt to influence legislation by propaganda or otherwise.

4. The permanent members of this association who may be from time to time referred to as "Trustees" shall be such number not less than five (5) as may be fixed in the by-laws of the corporation from time to time adopted.

5. The Trustees of the corporation shall have the power to adopt a seal, to make by-laws and rules for its administration, the election and qualifications of its membership, the election and fixing the terms of officers, the filling of vacancies in offices and the management of its affairs. The Trustees shall also have the power to repeal, alter and enforce any such by-laws from time to time in effect.

In Witness Whereof, we have hereunto set our hands this ..... day of December, 1943.

ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION
OF
THE B FOUNDATION

We, the undersigned, do hereby voluntarily associate ourselves for the purpose of forming a non-profit corporation under the laws of the State of California pursuant to the General Nonprofit Corporation Law, Title 1, Division 2, Part 1, of the Corporations Code of the State of California, and we hereby certify:

First: The name of the corporation is:

THE B FOUNDATION

Second: This corporation is a corporation which does not contemplate the distribution of gains, profits or dividends to the members thereof and is organized pursuant to the General Nonprofit Corporation Law of the State of California.

Third: The purposes for which this corporation is formed are:

(a) To receive and administer property and funds for charitable, educational, scientific, literary and religious purposes, and for no other purposes, said purposes being the specific and primary purposes for which this corporation is formed, and to that end to take and hold, by gift, devise, bequest, purchase or lease, either absolutely or in trust for such objects and purposes or any of them, any property, real, personal or mixed; to invest and re-invest any such property and perform all other acts necessary or expedient for the administration of the affairs and the attainment of the purposes of the corporation as set forth in paragraph (a) of this article Third.

Fourth: The principal office for the transaction of the business of the corporation shall be located in the County of Los Angeles, State of California.

Fifth: The number of directors of the corporation shall be three, and the names and addresses of the persons who are appointed to act in the capacity of directors until the election of their successors are:

Names	Addresses

Sixth: (a) The authorized number and qualifications of members of the corporation, the different classes of membership, if any, the voting and other rights and privileges of members, and their liability to dues or assessments, if any, and the method of collection thereof, and matters pertaining to the admission, withdrawal and suspension of members, and the transfer, forfeiture and termination of membership, shall be governed by the By-Laws of the corporation.

(b) The above named directors shall be the original members of the corporation.

Seventh: The affairs, business and activities of the corporation shall be conducted, managed, regulated and governed by the vote of a majority of the directors. Subject to the power of the members of the corporation to amend or repeal By-Laws, the directors shall have the power to adopt, amend or repeal By-Laws, except that a By-Law fixing or changing the number of directors may not be adopted, amended or repealed without the vote or written assent of members entitled to exercise a majority of the voting power, or the vote of a majority of a quorum at a meeting of members duly called, pursuant to the Articles or By-Laws.

Eighth: None of the property of the corporation, real or personal, shall ever be used or expended except in carrying out the purposes and objects of the corporation as set forth in Article Third, Paragraph (a). Upon dissolution of the corporation, either voluntarily, involuntarily or by operation of law, the assets of the corporation available for distribution shall be distributed and used in such manner as may be directed by the Board of Directors for the sole purposes and objects set forth in Article Third, Paragraph (a) and for no other purpose or object whatsoever.

In Witness Whereof, we have hereunto set our hands this ..... day of May, 1952.

CHARTER
THE C FOUNDATION

THIS INDENTURE made the ..... day of December, 1953, by and between A. B. C. of 10 Blank Road, Blanktown, New York, hereinafter called the SETTLOR, and

D. E. F. of 186 Blank Drive, Blanktown, New York; G. H. I. of 46 Blank Avenue, Blanktown, New York; J. K. L. of 14 Blank Road, Blanktown, New York; M. N. O. of 45 Blank Avenue, Blanktown, New York; and P. Q. R. of 30 Blank Avenue, Blanktown, New York, hereinafter called the TRUSTEES

WITNESSETH:

I

The Settlor has constituted and hereby does constitute THE C FOUNDATION, a charitable trust, hereinafter called the Foundation, to be administered and controlled by the Trustees and the Trustees do hereby accept the appointment herein as such Trustees for the uses and purposes hereinafter stated, and the sum of .... has been delivered by the Settlor to the Trustees as the initial payment of corpus into the trust.

The Trustees shall take the initial payment and all additional amounts which may be contributed hereto, invest and reinvest the same in securities, mortgages and other investments which the Trustees in their exclusive discretion shall deem suitable and proper for the Foundation without being limited to investments which by law are eligible for trust funds, collect the interest, income, dividends and profits therefrom and from time to time pay out such income and in their discretion the corpus or portions thereof to such persons, corporations or other entities as in the judgment of the Trustees will use such funds exclusively for the purposes stated in the next paragraph. All of the income received in any fiscal year of the Foundation shall be disbursed in that fiscal year. The first fiscal and operating year of the Foundation shall end June 30, 1954. After June 30, 1954, the fiscal and operating year of the Foundation shall be from the 1st day of July in one year to the 30th day of June in the next year.

II

Purposes

The monies so given by the Trustees shall be used exclusively for the following purposes: the promotion and advancement of scientific, technological, general educational and charitable projects. The Settlor has devoted the greater part of his productive years to the furthering of aeronautics through the development of training and education aids. For this reason, it is his desire that the Trustees give special consideration in its gifts from the trust to projects which will further advance training and education in aeronautics.

III

Trustees

The Trustees shall elect one of their group to be Chairman and one to be Secretary-Treasurer. The initial term of the Trustee J. K. L. shall be until June 30, 1954; the initial term of the Trustees D. E. F. and G. H. I. shall be until June 30, 1955; and the initial term of the Trustees M. N. O. and P. Q. R. shall be until June 30, 1956. Upon the respective expirations of said initial terms, a successor or successors shall be elected for a term of three (3) years each respectively by the Trustees whose terms do not then expire. A Trustee may resign at any time by tendering his written resignation to the Chairman or Secretary-Treasurer. In the event of such resignation, death or inability to serve, the remaining Trustees shall fill the vacancy so caused for the remainder of the term of such Trustee. In all matters a majority vote of the full board shall be controlling.

IV

Bond

At all times, a suitable fidelity bond, with an insurance company as surety, shall be kept in force for the Secretary-Treasurer in the penal sum of no less than the aggregate value of the fund in the hands of the Trustees, at the beginning of each fiscal and operating year and all disbursements from the fund shall be made by check signed by two of the Trustees, one of whom shall be the Secretary-Treasurer.

V

Administration of Foundation

The Trustees may appoint a Technical Assistance Board whose members shall serve at the pleasure of the Trustees in such number as the Trustees may from time to time designate. Members of such Board may be added from time to time and removed by the Trustees in their discretion. The Technical Assistance Board shall be responsible for the review and development of projects which shall be the basis of their recommendations to the Trustees for the granting of available monies. The Technical Assistance Board may in addition conduct surveys and investigations designed to strengthen their recommendations to Trustees and to determine the proper utilization of the monies available from the fund. The Trustees are authorized to employ such clerical help, consultants, staff assistance and legal counsel, and pay such expenses as they deem necessary and proper to carry on the purposes of the Foundation and to implement the work of the Board and the Trustees and use monies in the fund for such purpose, but no expenditures shall be made for this purpose except by authorization by the Trustees. In no event shall any property of the trust be returned to the Settlor or to any one who shall contribute to this Foundation. The Trustees shall not be responsible for the continuous investment of all of the funds intrusted to their care herein, but shall be diligent to keep as much of the said property invested as shall be practicable in the light of all of the circumstances.

VI

Contributions

Additional and other contributions of money and/or property to the corpus of the trust may be received by the Trustees for the purposes hereof from the Settlor and any other person, corporation or entity.

VII

Termination

The trust shall continue indefinitely, so long as there are funds in the possession of Trustees devoted to this trust, and it shall terminate only when there is no money or property remaining therein.

VIII

Law

This trust shall be governed by the law of the State of New York applicable generally and particularly to charitable and educational trusts.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF the Settlor has hereunto set his hand and seal and the Trustees in accepting the obligations herein imposed have hereunto set their hands and seals on the day and year first above written.

Appendix C

APPLICATION TO FOUNDATIONS

If, like the great majority of users of this book, you have turned to it because you are seeking foundation support for some organization or project, you will want to review what some of the foundations described herein have said relative to the manner in which they prefer to be approached.

The majority of foundations, that is to say those which make grants to other organizations, are in the business of giving away money. They expect to receive applications from exempt organizations. However, because they do not wish you to waste your time or theirs, they hope you will note the following facts.

First, all foundations prefer to be approached only for aiding projects or organizations functioning within the scope of their interests.

Second, there is a very definite relationship between the size of a foundation and the pattern of its grant making.

If the foundation is one of the larger ones which has selected some specific field or fields in which it is supporting research, experiments, or demonstrations, it is a waste of both the applicant's and the foundation's time for an appeal to be made for support of any work which lies outside the chosen field or fields. Applications for aid to such "project minded" foundations should provide at least the following information:

1. The purpose or purposes for which the funds will be used.
2. The problems to be dealt with and the methods to be applied.
3. The qualifications of the personnel who will conduct the project.
4. The length of time during which foundation aid is desired.
5. The method of financing a continuing project beyond the period of foundation aid.
6. The relation of this project to similar ones undertaken elsewhere.
7. A complete budget for the project including all existing sources of support and reflecting that the applicant has exhausted all ordinary means of financing the work.

If it is a larger foundation whose record shows that it is principally concerned with making a distinctive contribution through revitalizing certain institutions or areas, the application must relate to the area in which the foundation is interested or to institutions within that area.

If the foundation is one of the hundreds of smaller family or company foundations which is set up for broad philanthropic purposes, the trustees are not likely to heed the appeal unless the organization is one with which they have a regional, personal or family tie. For example, a small family foundation often aids the Alma Maters of its founders or it may aid a national agency with whose local counterpart it is familiar. But a small family foundation in Massachusetts is not likely to heed an appeal which comes "cold" from a small college in Iowa.

Small foundations of this type usually make grants in behalf of general budget support. Therefore the application should emphasize information about the financial situation of the entire institution. Such foundations sometimes wish to review financial statements of the institution over a period of years. They are often concerned also with the source of major support of the institution.

Whether the initial approach is made in writing or through a personal contact is governed by the nature of the applicant's relationship with the foundation. If an officer of an institution knows personally a trustee or officer of a foundation, he does not have to behave in an ostrich-like fashion and not let his acquaintance know that an application is being made.

However, at the proper point, all foundations, small as well as large, wish a written application. They are almost unanimous in expressing preference for a simple, concise memorandum or letter. As expressed by some of their officers, the reasons are as follows:

> Long verbose applications are undesirable. They require too much time to dig out essentials and should be avoided when possible.
> Simplicity, clarity and briefness of original application is highly desirable. Amplification should be available on request. Lavish presentation makes a bad impression, indicating a wasteful administration of funds.
> Our Board always votes to decline the long, involved presentation. The Directors have penetrating minds which promptly recognize cloudy thinking.

Approaches which foundations do not prefer, indeed which they definitely dislike, include: (1) circular letters, (2) argumentative applicants, (3) cagey individuals, (4) direct approaches to the trustees when they have employed officers and charged them with responsibility for screening applications.

In conclusion, to be successful in making applications to foundations, you will do well to remember such points as the following:

1. That foundations are highly individualistic and that no set pattern of appeal works with all.

2. That knowing all you can about a foundation is doubtless your most important tool.[1]
3. That all foundations want facts concerning your needs presented in simple and concise form.
4. That giving yourself the mental exercise of preparing a clear application makes your appeal more acceptable even to those foundations with which you may have a close personal contact.
